TempCleaner enables you to ensure that all file types that were created or modified recently are deleted as soon as you no longer need them. It allows you to specify exactly what types of data you want to remove, so you can easily get rid of miscellaneous temporary files. The main window looks like a normal folder, but once you click the folder icon, you are brought to another screen, where you can select the date range to delete. To prevent this program from deleting a data file accidentally, you are also given the option to manually select files. Another interesting feature is the ability to create smart folders, which are simply untitled files that are placed either in a certain date range or at a specific location. As a result, you can save temporary files only in certain areas or precisely on a specific date. For instance, you can create a folder named 'new files' that you can use to save temporary files created over the last few days. Of course, you can also create folders named 'documents', 'music' or 'video'. Another smart feature provided by TempCleaner is the ability to modify the settings and to customize the program to your own needs. You can select the number of files to delete each time, change the file extension filter, set the earliest date that a file may appear in a folder, whether files that are older than the mentioned date should be removed or not, add or remove items from the Hot folder, view only/delete/keep a list of files to delete on completion of the operation, change the order of the items in the list and more. Cool and useful application TempCleaner is a neat and useful application that may come in handy for a person that is looking to get rid of unnecessary files. It is well-designed, easy to use, has a customizable interface, and is relatively easy to operate. You might find the application's default settings to be too simplistic and some of its features too obscure, but you can still choose to make changes and modify it according to your preferences. If you are looking for an efficient and capable application that is able to clean up your system's temp files, TempCleaner is worth checking out.
