like environment. Destroy them to gain points, that increase as you destroy more enemies. Levels of enemies get progressively harder to challenge you. ● Enemy Armies - Enemy squads stay alive for a few turns, can be destroyed individually and move in battlefield terrain. Enemy armies are difficult to destroy, but make themselves easier to deal with by being spread out. All you need to do is destroy one of them to beat the level. ● Puzzle Elements - There are 5 zones that you have to take on in each level, each time with a different obstacle. Pick up some objects to solve the puzzles, that are sometimes deadly to enemies, but also you need to score some to progress. ● Boss Encounters - After a few enemy waves have been destroyed, in the future levels there's a boss ready to make you face your (hopefully not yet destroyed) enemies. ● Key Features: ● 8 levels, each one with a different obstacle to overcome, just like the structures of Aztec and Toltec. ● Music by Jairo Plana - "Azteca", "Aztec Fire" and "El Rey" ● Users can choose between the VR mode and the HUD mode, in which you can see the location of enemies, but not see enemies themselves. ● Fully Immersive Experience, for best gaming experience, please use either a HTC Vive headset or an Oculus Rift and set it to passthrough. Or at least set it to "True" for best experience. ● Use an Oculus Touch controller or HTC Vive controllers to interact with your VR environment, and the objects. ● Main Screen ScreenShot: ● More and more features are planned for this game, based on user feedback (mostly requests for graphics improvements), coming soon. ● FreeVR Toolkit: Please do notice that this game was built using the FreeVR Toolkit. : A True Crime Story The FBI originally investigated itself for possible prosecutorial misconduct in its investigation and prosecution of two suspects accused of concealing a child's murder from the police during their 1997 manhunt: 17-year-old Naoimh "Sammy" McNeil and her boyfriend, Christopher

Vannoy. The allegations were first reported by the Wall Street Journal. In other words: How could they—the FBI—miss something so obvious? In October, Vannoy took a bullet in the head while trying to stage a "suicide" after police stopped a car whose occupants appeared to be involved in the kidnapping of a 3-year-old girl. In recent years, such claims have multiplied.

Now, seven years after the newspaper article prompted an internal investigation into FBI agents and prosecutors, a legislative investigation into these issues is finally under way.

In an April 3 New York Times Opinion piece, Stephen Kinzer called the FBI's treatment of McNeil and Vannoy a case study in systematic "protections" and "political favoritism": "If the toddler's death can be blamed in part on investigative blunders committed by the FBI, then, from the point of view of the agency's critics, the solution is clear: Treat even the most clearly innocent people more strictly." Not until 2009, however, did then-Attorney General Eric Holder appoint a high-profile panel—headed by former U.S. Attorney Carol Lam, and joined by former Mississippi Senator Bill Bradley, fellow Mississippian and Clinton-era FBI Director William Sessions, and Chicago's former U.S. Attorney Joseph McMahon—to investigate—and root out—prosecutorial and FBI errors: "Our investigation centers on the question of whether officials improperly failed to secure a conviction in a high-profile kidnapping case in which a child was killed in 1993...Our inquiry is not into the circumstances of the death of the child, who no one disputes was murdered. Rather, our report will investigate whether prosecutorial mistakes or lapses in judgment alone caused the conviction to be overturned." "The lack of a federal death penalty in Washington, D.C. means that whatever we find must be carried out, if at all, at the state level," explained National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers Director Richard Dunham, a witness at the committee hearing on this potentially massive, and yet-to-be-completed, job.
