Data-driven gameplay will be available across the pitch in a number of areas. For the first time, during high-intensity moments within the playing of the game, animation will be accentuated on specific areas of the pitch. There is not a dry moment in the game and we think that is the most important thing - that the players feel like footballers and you like playing them." "The feeling you get when playing the new FIFA is the same sense you will get when watching the real thing in person", adds Head of Product Marketing at EA Sports, Liam Kelly. "We have heard from fans that, for the first time, they want to recreate the different styles of football being played around the world. And, we have worked hard to make sure that the FIFA of today will feel true to how you and I love the game. "For me, the most rewarding part of my career with EA has been the passionate response to FIFA - from fans, the press, and our internal teams around the world - to tell us what they love about the game. And, that'
