NHL: Aaron Boone on fun, but understandably emotional day Riding a city bus with a mic in his hands, Aaron Boone found himself negotiating with a group of kids who'd stolen a bus from an underprivileged area of Brooklyn. When he brought up the subject of the scoreless tie between the New York Rangers and New Jersey Devils at the Meadowlands, Boone couldn't help but draw on the day's date: "We're all even, right?" The bus stopped in front of the historic Funk Zone on the B and D Lines in Brooklyn. If you've followed the team, you already know the date. The Devils denied the Rangers their first goal on Thursday to take a 3-2 win over New Jersey, end an 11-game winning streak and help stay alive in the first round of the Stanley Cup Playoffs. "I'll never forget that day, either," Boone said as he sat down for an in-depth conversation the other day with NHL.com. "It was the first time I really got to talk to kids who I just imagined being in that situation. "A lot of them are going through that struggle. They're going through everything. They're growing up, they're in school. They're trying to make something of themselves. That was a tough day for them, but I liked the opportunity to be there. "I just saw so many different emotions. I'm proud of them. They're young kids and they're working really hard to make it and build their dreams. I have a ton of respect for that. It was a fun day." They were met at the coach's table, too: Boone's parents, the great girls in his high school years and his great-uncle, Mike. Mike is a longtime New Jersey resident who loves the state and couldn't believe it when he saw Boone finish the postgame press conference with a question about his tie. He was there to support his godson. "That's the weird thing," Boone said. "Every time I go back, you see all these other people. I can't believe he has a crush on me. He's my good uncle. I really don't have that connection to him. He's awesome, though." His parents? They're fine. "My mom's always telling me you've been to New Jersey too much," Boone said. "I've got to be the first kid

I actually got some back from the new version of the Imperial Eagle. There was quite a bit more bling, I was pretty much hyped and jumped to the other side of the table the second I won it. But at my point of a diff estate it isn't worth anything, so I decided to trade it. Overall a pretty good set of booster packs. Those numbers on the foil Donkey are pretty crap, I would have expected them to be at least toffees. I got great packs, the commons are really nice and I was really impressed by the NM Imperial Eagle. I got 4 of these things which is an unbelievable ratio. I got 3 commons, 2 rares and 1 of the expensive things. Considering I got 4 of the 5 items I really wanted (only the Eclipse was missing) I got the booster packs a very good ratio. I was surprised at a lot of the rares. The 2 Radiant minions were great (despite the low energy cost), and Dark Merc was very strong. The very end of the set was fantastic, the Eclipse and the Atman were great additions, and the Moonbrake was a great end of the cycle. The commons aren't great, but for the most part they are acceptable. I wish they were interesting, I mean, the phantom golem was awesome! I got the Panos, the two golems, the Imperial Eagle, the Mamba and a Fanfare. The only 2 other commons were Okay or bad. The Imperial Eagle is really very good, but the Panos is a bit weak. The rares are really nice. I got pretty much everything I wanted. I would have loved to have gotten the rider and two Atmans, but I still got everything I wanted. The Phantom golem was awesome, so were the two Slaves of Fury. I really am glad I got this. I'll be running this set for a while. I heard you get a better ratio of rares, but that is too bad because in this box all the rares are very weak. Not a big booster box, but a great one nonetheless. The rare is a nice addition to the rare set but it's really a terrible booster box and even I knew that after I got the box. I'm really tempted to trade it for the Archer set now. I couldn't care less about another Eclipse...I have the one I have right now and it didn
