If you can't view the video, please use this link: Game "Battle berserker" Gameplay: If you can't view the video, please use this link: November, Google's ad services unit made the surprise move to market itself as a one-stop shop for digital marketing needs. In January, the company launched several new features, including its first social commerce product, Google AdWords + Shop, and a free, ad-supported version of YouTube. Today the company announced it's adding a new tool to the mix: a sales-oriented version of AdWords, dubbed "AdWords Fundamentals for Merchants." The new product will not only help sellers reach more consumers, but will also be familiar to advertisers looking to rank higher in the search results. To access the new product, you'll need to first sign up for AdWords, which costs a one-time $299 fee. The new tool will also have a monthly fee, although it's unclear how much that is. From there, you can build a landing page, or use the company's customizable designs to create your own. As with the standard version of AdWords, you can target specific keywords based on what your potential consumers search for, although you'll need to use related ad formats, such as local business cards and map ads, in order to reach them. On top of that, you can also build a specific landing page for every product or service you sell on the platform, along with a specific marketing plan. AdWords Fundamentals for Merchants is supposed to offer all of those features, without the need to create all the separate accounts required by the standard product, according to a company blog post. The new product is slated to go live for beta testers in the coming weeks. A full rollout should follow, Google says. The company says this version of AdWords and the fundamental one are "

Adventure can be simple to understand and enjoy, if you play the right way! Here's some tips to help you out if you're just beginning: * Use "use weapon/skill" and "use potion/spell" for your skills, not "take action" or "attack" * More often than not, it's better to avoid the use of "create monster" since it's rather impractical and time consuming * Power plays and magic can be cast easier if you use the weapon/skill/potion path instead of the attack path For more tips and ideas, check out the official Adventurer's Journal website! [What Is This Game About? There's Monsters in every place. You are the hero, ready to take on any monster you see. It could be as easy or as hard as you want to make it. The world is yours to be explored. This game is for ages 8 and up.] Version History: 1.0 * Vol 2 is here * Vol 1 is here 1.1 * Fixed some things (and thanks to everyone who reported issues.!) * Removed some files 1.2 * Removed some files (There were some good files but just making too much work to upload them) 1.3 * Fixed spelling mistakes on file naming (There were wrong files.) 1.4 * Changed the way small pop ups appear (Thanks to anyone who reported issues on this version.) [How Did It Come To Be? In a monastery in a small village, there was a seven year old boy who was following after a fantasy monster. The boy decided to be a hero, that was his dream. He said that he wanted to make the monsters fall, the villagers were afraid to let the monsters through, that was the boy's fault. The boy got accepted and became the first adventurer. He wanted to find treasure and weapons and he did. It wasn't until his final voyage where he found the real treasure. He didn't want to die, but he did. He didn't understand why this happened. He never told anyone what he found, but it was his dream to become a hero. Now, many people know about the boy's dream. His friends are also adventurers
