What's new:

Warning: This post contains major otaku erotica. If you don't enjoy such material (I don't care how old you are), you should probably skip this one. To most children, levels or elevators are ordinary synonyms for safety. For some, it's the height of adulthood to take elevator rides. But one small catgirl had a situation which sadly made them look like mice. She was kidnapped from her apartment and her parents had no hope of getting their daughter back. Forced to find out what happened to their captive, they played a game in the park. This happens to be a non-*Series story and is by itself pretty good. RatcatGirl playfully pounced after her softball. Seems like a lame sporting activity like others might of thought. She had however, missed Risiko in the hallway two years ago and it had been quite an experience for her. She yelled, looking up, "You are early!" Risiko grabbed his shirt and pulled him inside. "I'm sorry I can't wait for your consent. Uragiri-chan is going to be mad at me." She winked as she spoke. Sure enough, the elevator started to make the downward descent. It was one of those services that showed you the floor numbers. Risiko activated the safety device as not to fall prey to calamities or the plight of those sleeping above. Such was the little girl's overactive imagination. Risiko had just popped in the tracksuit he grabbed from his pile when suddenly the elevator jerked and stopped. He looked out and the elevator was parked on the ground floor. A person stood in the corner pointing a weapon at him. A die-hard blunt object had been replaced by a cylindrical-type gun with a barrel that had an interesting shape. “Free the little man, Catgirls!” Risiko was sure that was this new chick’s line. He slowly raised the arm holding the bent up safety switch. The lights went off and he was under the cover of darkness. Besides, it would be too late if he tried to stop the girl who was going to shoot him anyway. “Dying isn’t a problem for the people who are afraid of death!” The female voice rang out in the
