To determine if premenopausal women receiving the oral estradiol and progestin regimen have circulating levels of interleukin 1 beta (IL-1 beta) and interleukin 6 (IL-6) similar to those found in postmenopausal women receiving no estrogens. Serum IL-1 beta and IL-6 concentrations were determined by enzyme-linked immunoassays in premenopausal women treated with estradiol (1 mg/day orally) and progesterone (50 mg/day orally) (group A), and in postmenopausal women receiving no hormone replacement therapy (group B). Serum IL-1 beta and IL-6 levels were significantly higher in group A than group B. Cytokine levels decreased and became similar to group B levels after women had discontinued hormone replacement therapy. No significant relationships were found between levels of IL-1 beta or IL-6 and age, body mass index, or
