To play "8 Ball" on the iPhone you will be using 4 swipes, and using an on-screen cue. For the most part the gameplay is pretty simple. You will be controlling the 8 ball. Some of the levels include moving and bombs, simply tap where you want to place your cue stick. That's about it. If the game is kind of challenging, it's because you have to make the best choice in terms of where to place your stick in each level. This means you have to look ahead at where you'll be putting your stick, but keep an eye on what's happening in the table where you're putting it. That's it, this game is pretty simple. But it will also have you working your fingers overtime! To be honest, I found the game entertaining and fun. As we mentioned earlier, you'll be controlling the 8 ball. In some levels you might encounter a green, red or blue ball. You can tap the ball to make it move. If you make contact with the other ball, it will bounce off and the collision will occur between the cue stick and the other ball. Once you hit the right ball, it will leave its lane and disappear. After the collision between two balls you'll have to make the best decision for where to move your stick. You'll see the 8 ball moving across the table. The ball at the end of the level can be in one of the following three positions: Green: The ball is in the middle of the lane and you can hit it. Red: The ball is in the center of the lane and you can't move it. Blue: The ball is near the end of the lane and you have to drop it towards the end of the table. After you make your decision, your stick will move accordingly. In this game you have to score as much as possible for the number of points, for the game's duration. The best part of the game is that you are also able to choose the characters on your 3 characters team. There will be a green, red and blue ball to collect. In this game you will have three characters of your choice: Pool Shooter Red: The sharpest shooter in the pool! He might seem like an overly confident character but he will always go for the impossible shot. Pool Shot Red: Simple and easy. He likes to shoot

What's new:

AN INTRODUCTION The armed forces of Earth and the various empires have kept their fleets on station in space for centuries, utilizing the command of distance as a military advantage. Thousands of satellites orbit Earth, broadcasting news, communications, and images for close viewing at a much safer distance. The use of satellites as a force multiplier has been paramount in over half a century of battles. It is slowly being phased out because of the new generation of war robots which are connected to command centers as the primary means of communication and reports. More than one-half of the satellites remain unused because they have been driven to excessive orbits around the planet. Airplanes, especially the jet, are the predominant naval aircraft, just as it was around fifty years ago. Zetas and their minions still occasionally invade Earth and the various countries have been slowly invaded every now and then over centuries. Agents of Desisto have some success on capturing many of their high ranking Zeta's, but many escape. The Zetas are steadfast in their desire to invade and control all countries they deem necessary. WORLD WAR I It was the first war of the robots, named "The Machine Wars," as the world governments struggled to develop an advanced robot for combat; a machine which could not be driven by emotions. Robots are much stronger than humans and hold no fear or hatred. The first generation of robots was highly successful in combat and mass produced. Most every soldier was now a robot. Many were feared due to their much greater speed and endurance, and length of fear factor. The European nations, because of their resources, held enough funding to develop newer, stronger robots and secretly as well as publicly developed and fielded newer models. These were allowed to slip into production, as the older robots were seen as capable and thus accepted. The first models were given the ability to think and be self-aware. The older robots were not capable of rational thought and often committed atrocities against their own creations. They did not seem to value life, and could become quite bloodthirsty. The newer model, of which there were fewer available, were trained at the state-of-the-art, more often than not by the military. They were very smart, calculating, and could plan weeks to months in advance. It quickly became apparent that technologically superior robots could better control the battlefield while the armies of this war were thrown against each other nearly everywhere on the planet. Robots of that era had a limited
