Nigeria's stock market exchange has accepted an online cryptocurrency trading platform as a regulated primary market on the continent, according to media reports Nov. 15. According to the reports, Yahoo! Finance, a US-based news portal, stated that Bursa Exchange, Nigeria's equities and derivatives exchange, is considering to accept cryptocurrency trading due to regulatory compliance considerations. The exchange aims to list a number of "ERC-20 tokens on its exchange platform." There is no official word on which tokens could be listed or how it will approach the approval process with the regulators, the news source said. The Nigerian National Assembly has indicated it will consider legislating cryptocurrency in the future, including on the taxation of transactions, operations and taxes on crypto assets. The Nasdaq Exchange, South Africa's biggest stock market, announced plans to offer cryptocurrency trading in South Africa last month. Jacques-Émile Blanche Jacques-Émile Blanche (1820–1895) was a French industrialist and is best known as the founder of the company of Blanche, husband of the 19th century French courtesan "La Belle Émilie". Life Jacques-Émile Blanche born on 12 March 1820 in Machecoul (Creuse) as the oldest of six children. After a preparatory course in the Collège de Sainte-Barbe, Blanche moved to Bordeaux to enroll in business school at the age of 20, where he began to work as the manager of a public undertaking firm, "Aiguillon et Cie" at the Bordeaux Expo'71. Shortly thereafter, he married Marion Laure Roux (1828-1886), the daughter of a grain merchant. Marion and her mother named Blanche as "husband in title". The couple settled in Paris, where Blanche worked as an inspector for the regional Government and also held minor positions within "Les Hauts-
