For license key files (.licx), it can be read by the script just like any other file (this mean script will need external knowledge if it needs to access particular file extension like .licx and .licm files). Note: The scripts will automatically detect the license key version (10) and license file (such as .licm, .licx, .licm.licx, .ldk, and .licm.ldk file types) based on the location (path) and organization. It supports all Windows versions and both home and enterprise edition, in which it needs to be re-run if the location of license file/s change or if the product no longer is running on Windows 10. After the activation, the digital license key will be able to run only on the specific hardware. If you use a remote, such as a CoPilot Smart Remote, the hardware key will only be valid on that specific remote.
