In the expansion pack for Dungeon Siege II, 'Broken World', two new character classes have been introduced. These classes are multi-class characters: the Fist of Stone being a multi-class of Melee and Nature Magic, and the Blood Assassin being a multi-class of Ranged and Combat Magic.

These new classes have been given their own specialised skill trees in addition to the others, allowing them to multi-class more easily without being at as much of a disadvantage. For example, the Fist of Stone is able to cause small earthquakes when attacking to keep up with the damage output of a pure melee character, and the Blood Assassin is able to cause targets to hemorrhage blood to keep up with the damage output of a pure ranged character (as they multi-class, they cannot upgrade their weaponry as often and would otherwise be weaker in combat).

Dungeon Siege supports multiplayer cooperative gaming over LAN, the Internet, and the GameSpy network. Multiple players can cooperate in separate-but-allied parties. There is a total limit of eight characters, though only four can be player-controlled. Purchased pets count towards this limit but summoned creatures (from spells) do not. There is an unsupported 'old school' mode in multiplayer, allowing up to eight players to play simultaneously. To enable this, add 'oldschool=true' (without quotes) to command line or the.ini file. Dungeon Siege II supports multiplayer cooperative gaming over LAN, the Internet, and the GameSpy network.
